AUTHOR/ILLUSTRATOR

Lori Taylor

LORI TAYLOR is a bog stomping, trail stumbling Michigan artist, author, and illustrator who captures children with her tales to release them into their wild imagination and great outdoors to find their own story. Inspired from her childhood Clarkston home among pines and ponds, Lori knew that drawing, writing, nature, books, and science would be her life.

Lori's humorous, realistic fictional HOLLY WILD series was selected as a "Great Lakes, Great Reads" from the Historical Society of Michigan, were used in northern Michigan "Battle of the Books" literacy program, and have won awards for illustration at Michigan fine art fairs. Lori has been artist-in-residence for Michigan's state and national parks, a park seasonal naturalist, and educational exhibit preparator.

Lori lives in the heart of the Manistee National Forest in Bitely, Michigan. When she is not making books she is wandering wild places in search of story.
